Privacy and Bear Creek Lumber Customers.

Customer surveys and feedback forms are a great marketing tool for a small company like Bear Creek Lumber. Those of you who recently called have also found that our customer service representatives spend a few minutes getting information from new customers for our contacts database. Some people may find these questions intrusive, others may be afraid this information may be sold or shared with a third party. At Bear Creek Lumber _all_ information taken from our customers is confidential. We have never, and will never, sell our data information to other companies. We firmly believe in our customers' right to privacy.

We strive to ship top quality lumber and to provide top service. Pictured above is the BCL Sales Team line-up.

We ask questions to those who contact us or send questionnaires out to those interested in our newsletter solely for the purpose of better outreach, better customer service and better in-house analysis of our services. We need to have enough information at the front end to be able to process your order, or inquiry, after you make your decision to do business with Bear Creek Lumber. We have a large database managed by a small staff. The more information we have on file, the faster we can work to get your product to you. We have spent the last few years really refining our paperwork process so we can give you fast, reliable and efficient service. We may also contact you with special offers and notices from time to time. You can choose to opt-out of these by emailing or calling us.

To prevent unauthorized access, maintain data accuracy, and ensure the correct use of information, we have put in place appropriate physical, electronic, and managerial procedures to safeguard and secure the information we collect. Protecting the privacy of the very young is especially important. For that reason, we never collect or maintain information from those we actually know are under 13.

You can access all your personal information that we collect and maintain, by emailing us, providing your address, phone, full name, email and a way to prove you are trying to access your own records. We use this procedure to better safeguard your information. To protect your privacy and security, we will also take reasonable steps to verify your identity before granting access or making corrections.

Weathered Cedar: to stain or not to stain?

Many times our customers ask, -"What will Cedar look like after being exposed to the elements?" Our saleman Merle Kirkley recently visited some customers in New York and brought us pictures of old projects that display six years of weathering. These pictures depict both Western Red and Alaskan Yellow Cedar.

In 2001 we received the image on the left from one of our customers. The clear grade Red Cedar beams were just installed and the wood looked as if it would right off the mill.

The right image shows the same pergola six years later. Merle visited this loyal customer and was pleased to witness how well clear grade Cedar holds to the maritime climate of coastal New York. Below is another example, before and after.

Alaskan Yellow Cedar was utilized throughout the whole exterior of this beach house with 1"x3" siding and 2"x6" decking. Choosing Yellow Cedar was no accident, it is naturally rot and moisture resistant, making it a durable material for this salty environment. It also weathers to a silvery grey, reminiscent of driftwood. The image on the right clearly shows the difference between the two tones of Yellow Cedar, backed by weathered Western Red Cedar. Below is a view of the front elevation.
